

Protecting Your Lab's Workers & Liability

Does your Health & Safety Program meet OSHA requirements?
Has it been communicated properly to your employees?

Having an expert assist you in conducting a thorough assessment is vital to determining your lab's risk position and prevention needs in regard to worker safety. An onsite health & safety training is the best approach for your team to recognize and protect workers from the most common safety & health hazards in their work environment.

A SafeLink consultant can assist you in meeting OSHA requirements & CDC guidelines for Infection Control and Infectious Disease Preparedness.

"Thank you, SafeLink, for always going the extra mile, your safety and compliance trainings are unparalleled and I am forever grateful to have crossed paths." Hannah K, Lab OSHA Coordinator

Onsite Safety Assessment & Employee Safety Training

Onsite Safety Assessment of the Laboratory—This interactive safety check-up includes a survey of your facility and your safety procedures conducted by a SafeLink safety expert familiar with the lab work environment. The assessment is followed up with a written report of prevention needs. The CDC guidelines are taken into consideration including COVID-19 Infectious Disease Preparedness plus OSHA Compliance including: Infection Control Practices & Procedures, PPE Analysis, Bloodborne Pathogens—Exposure Control, Ergonomics, Fire & Electrical Safety, Emergency Procedures, Chemical Safety/Hazard Communication, Walking & Working Surfaces, Injury & Illness Reporting, plus more.

Onsite Health & Safety Employee Training—This live training assists with meeting OSHA's training requirements and CDC guidelines including COVID-19. Training is customized and interactive using colorful presentations designed for the lab work environment. Includes OSHA-required training documentation & CE credit. A custom safety training video is available for one year following the onsite visit for training employees who missed the original training and for new hires throughout the year.
